About

'In Pieces' is a reference to picking up the pieces after the calamity of 2020. On one of his routine wanderings through the vineyards, Etienne found antique pottery shards strewn about, probably emerging after a vineyard plowing. It was like discovering a little treasure, something from the past which catches your eye, a touch of blue and white to remind them of the history of their land. It gave Stephanie and Etienne a renewed sense of place, and an appreciation for the hands that have tended to the vines and crops there for generations. In a more figurative sense, 'In Pieces' also refers to several pieces (barrels) of Chenin Blanc which are used to make up this blend from vineyards in Stellenbosch, Swartland and Paarl. The shards on the label are images of the actual shards they found.

The grapes were brought into the cellar and whole-bunch pressed immediately into old French oak (fourth fill and older). Fermentation occurred spontaneously, after which the wines remained in the barrels for 9 months of aging. At this point the wine was racked off the lees, and the wine was bottled with a sulfur addition. No fining or filtering.

Tasting Note

Medium straw yellow. The nose reveals lemon, orange, and clove, while the palate leans more fruity, with pineapple and mango at the forefront. Lees aging adds a yeasty note before a dry, lingering finish.
